Dear Readers,

Today, the role of a school is not only to pursue the academic excellence but also to motivate and empower the students to be lifelong learners, critical thinkers, and productive members of an ever-changing global society. This session has begun with huge challenge in the form of pandemic, an unprecedented crisis which has disrupted most of the planning and proved to be a really uncertain period for all the stakeholders.

The world today is changing at such an accelerated rate that we as educators need to pause and reflect on this entire system of Education. "To motivate the late bloomers, to mold the mediocre and to challenge the gifted" has been our teaching notion. Vidhyashram has striven to be the pioneers in e-learning, where teachers have found their ways to interact with students using an assortment of software. We are confident to sustain our digital learning plans, and move towards a long lasting, robust path to teach in distance mode. In this constantly fluctuating times, we owe it to ourselves, our children and parents, to prove that, our teachers, presumably groomed in old fashion ways, are adaptive to new tools, overhauled curriculum design, virtual pedagogy and can weather the storm to ensure that our children continue to learn and grow.

I strongly believe that we have no option but to reinvent and upgrade ourselves. however difficult it will be. We will continue to recall all the lessons of resilience and courage, we will extend a helping hand to each other and we will overcome this finite phase with equanimity, nerves of steel and heart brimming with love and compassion.

And on the flip side, when this grim crisis is over, teachers would have emerged with upgraded skills in technology, learnt new ways of teaching, embraced machine learning and improved vastly in digital literacy.

Jai Hind.
